ABOUT

Retail Sales Connect is part of Relevant Information, a data and research organization whose goal is to provide important, reliable, and valuable information to business and consumers.

The Salesman's Guides, published in print for over fifty years and available online since 2011, have long been recognized as one of the premier sources of retailer buyer contact information in North America. With the addition of our Major Retailer Reports, Retail Sales Connect builds on the success of the Salesman's Guide by offering customers not only the most up to date and extensive buyer contact information, but also in-depth intelligence on major retailers in the United States and Canada.

This valuable information is available to you through a variety of different product offerings. Check out our full line of products, or contact us today and tell us how we can help you!

Company Profile

Incorporated in 1986, Office Depot, Inc. (NYSE:ODP) is headquartered in Boca Raton, FL. The company is an office products and services supplier with 1,912 retail stores in 60 countries around the world. Its product lines include office supplies, papers, ink and toners, food and candy, cleaning equipment, computer accessories, and furniture. The company markets brands such as ABM, Bell & Honey, Casio, Ericsson, Hewlett Packard, Kodak, Nippon, and Samsung. Its businesses are primarily operated under three segments: North American Retail, North American Business Solutions, and International Division. The company's operates nine public websites in U.S., Canada, and Mexico; and 40-plus public websites outside North America. Per the latest annual report, the company had a total sales of $11.2 billion and has 64,000 employees.

Office Depot, Inc. was founded in 1986 in Fort Lauderdale where it began its first store's operation. The company became a publicly traded entity in 1988. In a short span of time, the company expanded its footprint in 27 states and had about 173 stores. In 1990, Office Depot merged with The Office Club, Inc. and became North America's largest retailer of office products. During 1992 and 1993, the company acquired H.Q. Office International, Inc., Wilson Stationary & Printing Company, and Eastman Office Products Corporation, as well as had six additional mergers. With an international licensing agreement the company diversified its operations in Poland, Hungary, and Thailand. It also opened its stores in Mexico, France, and Japan under joint venture agreements. In 1998, the company merged with a public company Viking Office Products. This helped the company grow internationally and position itself as a leading retailer of office products. During the same year, the company launched its first internet website www.officedepot.com. Today, the company is a worldwide provider of office supplies and services. It merchandises both national and private-label brands. It operates its distribution business through in-stores, the Internet, contract delivery, and direct mail. It identifies its value proposition as being business centric by making work life easier. Office Depot meets all business needs by supplying office supplies at affordable rates. Its websites sometimes feature products that are not available on its websites. The company also has periodic discussions with its customers to understand their requirements so that they can meet their needs.

Buying profile

Office Depot, Inc. is a retailer of office products and supplies. The company obtains most of its products from primary suppliers and manufacturers. It is also open to business associations with vendors who can offer the company with merchandise that can reduce their unit product cost. Office Depot makes its inventory purchases on agreements with vendors that are automatically renewed unless they are canceled due to annual negotiated agreements or periodic updates. The company also enters into event based programs with vendors which can be of various types such as special pricing for a specific time period and advertising support. Office Depot gives priority to its corporate social responsibility policy and vendor compliance program that it expects its vendors and suppliers to follow. The company makes a rigorous check, review, expansion, and update for optimum use of this policy. It company has framed its business strategies in such a way that it meets the ethical, social, and environmental specifications and standards. In this regard, the company periodically conducts a vendor facility assessment program. As part of implementing this, company representatives will visit the suppliers' facilities to check for their compliance to the company's

The company's operates nine public websites in U.S., Canada, and Mexico; and 40-plus public websites outside North America. Per the latest annual report, the company had a total sales of $11.2 billion and has 64,000 employees.

Office Depot, Inc. was founded in 1986 in Fort Lauderdale where it began its first store's operation. The company became a publicly traded entity in 1988. In a short span of time, the company expanded its footprint in 27 states and had about 173 stores. In 1990, Office Depot merged with The Office Club, Inc. and became North America's largest retailer of office products. During 1992 and 1993, the company acquired H.Q. Office International, Inc., Wilson Stationary & Printing Company, and Eastman Office Products Corporation, as well as had six additional mergers. With an international licensing agreement the company diversified its operations in Poland, Hungary, and Thailand. It also opened its stores in Mexico, France, and Japan under joint venture agreements. In 1998, the company merged with a public company Viking Office Products. This helped the company grow internationally and position itself as a leading retailer of office products. During the same year, the company launched its first Internet website www.officedepot.com. Today, the company is a worldwide provider of office supplies and services. It merchandises both national and private-label brands. It operates its distribution business through in-stores, the Internet, contract delivery, and direct mail.
